Victor Massaro is Vice President of Contracts and Risk Management at Versar Global Solutions, where he leads the enterprise Contracts and Subcontracts functions while providing executive leadership across the company's broader risk, security, crisis management, insurance, and business resilience programs. He serves as a principal advisor on government contracting matters and partners with executive leadership to identify and mitigate contractual, financial, operational, compliance, security, and reputational risks across federal, state and local, commercial, domestic, and international programs.

Victor also leads the continued modernization of Versar's contract management environment, leveraging contract lifecycle management platforms, data analytics, and AI-enabled tools to strengthen governance, improve visibility, streamline workflows, and support risk-informed decision-making. His broader responsibilities include enterprise risk reporting, corporate and industrial security oversight, crisis management and business continuity, and coordination of the company's insurance and risk-financing programs.

Prior to Versar, Victor held progressively senior leadership roles at Amentum and AECOM, supporting complex federal programs spanning contingency operations, sustainment, and mission support. His experience includes both CONUS and OCONUS contracting, as well as in-theater contracts and operational leadership in Afghanistan. In recognition of his leadership and contributions to the government contracting community, Victor was named one of WashingtonExec's Top Contracts Execs to Watch in 2024.

Victor holds an MBA from George Mason University and a B.A. in Political Science from Arizona State University.
