Alexander represents emerging, middle market and Fortune 500 companies in complex commercial disputes. He is a certified Lean Six Sigma practitioner who brings a process improvement mindset to every stage of a case — resulting in disciplined, strategic counsel that advances client goals.

Alexander represents clients in commercial and real estate disputes, with a particular focus on property and lease matters for landlords and developers. His practice also includes contract claims, business torts, partnership conflicts, and corporate governance issues. He handles cases through mediation, arbitration, and litigation in state and federal courts, including on appeal.

Before Fox Rothschild

A former summer associate, Alexander joined Fox Rothschild full-time after graduating from law school. During law school, he worked as a legal innovation consultant for an international law firm, identifying inefficiencies, designing improvements, and successfully implementing practices that reduced client costs. He served on the editorial staffs of the Hastings International & Comparative Law Review and the Harvard Journal on Law & Public Policy (Vol. 45/Issue 1), and authored The Law as a Process in the U.K.-based Modern Lawyer: Ideas for Legal Leaders.

Beyond Fox Rothschild

Alexander is a Judge Advocate in the United States Air Force, currently serving as a Captain in the California Air National Guard, where his practice spans military prosecutions under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, international law — including emerging issues in space law and cyber operations — and civil law.

On an overseas military assignment, Alexander was tapped to negotiate and liaise on a stalled international agreement, working directly with host nation and foreign counterparts to successfully move the agreement forward. He carries this negotiator's instinct into his civilian practice: settling smart when possible, litigating hard when not.

A former cornetist with the Kansas City Wind Symphony and jazz trumpeter, Alexander is a strong advocate for music education and has taught in Los Angeles elementary schools through Harmony Project, a nonprofit serving disadvantaged youth.
