Candace concentrates her practice on complex commercial litigation, construction disputes and professional liability defense in Seattle and throughout Washington state.

She represents businesses, insurers and individuals in matters ranging from construction defect and homeowners association claims to business torts, director and officer liability, and personal injury claims.

She has secured significant results in Washington state and federal courts, including summary judgment dismissals, vacatur of default judgments, and favorable outcomes before the Washington Court of Appeals. Her practical, business-focused approach helps clients manage risk and exposure while pursuing effective litigation strategies.

Candace also counsels clients on construction licensing, permitting and regulatory compliance issues.
