Beyond Fox Rothschild

Active in both the public and private sector, Elizabeth serves as:

- Governor's Appointee on Legal Privacy to the Governing Board of the New Jersey Integrated Population Health Data Project, which oversees an effort to use data to drive population health research designed to improve residents' health, safety, security and well-being and improve government efficiency.

As part of her ongoing commitment to giving back to the local community, Elizabeth worked pro bono to draft legislation for health care providers in Camden, Trenton and Newark, New Jersey, that launched the development of Medicaid ACOs, now recodified as Regional Health Hubs. The program centered around creating a diverse collaboration of health care providers, including hospitals, clinics, behavioral health providers, social workers and homeless advocates to find a way to improve patient care while also cutting costs to Medicaid and the health system as a whole.

Before Fox Rothschild

Elizabeth previously chaired the health care department at a New Jersey-area firm for seven years.
