Evan represents clients in a full range of complex government contracting matters, with a focus on the aviation, aerospace, technology and defense industries.

His practice is informed by his 11 years of work with the U.S. government, including several years in the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) where his work included supervising a team of bid protest hearing officers and guiding all aspects of the bid protest adjudication process.

Evan regularly litigates bid protests, claims and disputes before the GAO, the various Boards of Contract Appeals and the U.S. Court of Federal Claims. His bid protest experience includes the full spectrum of legal issues, such as technical evaluation challenges, pricing concerns, restrictive specifications and organizational conflicts of interest.

A strategic problem solver, Evan counsels clients regarding state and federal investigations, policy, regulation compliance and transactions.
