Kwabena advises clients on tax planning and structuring across a wide range of domestic and cross-border transactions.

He regularly counsels private equity firms and clients in a broad range of industries on the tax aspects of mergers, acquisitions, recapitalizations, reorganizations and joint ventures. His work includes advising fund sponsors on the formation and structuring of private investment funds, addressing considerations for both U.S., non-U.S. and tax-exempt investors — including issues related to effectively connected income, unrelated business taxable income, and carried interest.

Kwabena also counsels clients on the tax aspects of partnership and joint venture arrangements, including waterfall distribution mechanics, profits interests, capital account maintenance and allocation methodologies.

His transactional practice focuses on tax structuring across a range of taxable, tax-deferred and tax-free transactions. He also has considerable experience structuring transactions in the healthcare industry.
