Lindsay is a compassionate family law attorney who works closely with clients to navigate complex family law matters.

While possessing extensive trial experience, she remains settlement oriented as she assists individuals across New Jersey and New York with a variety of sensitive family issues, including divorce, child custody and support, equitable distribution of assets, alimony, premarital agreements, domestic violence matters and non-dissolution matters. Lindsay also is a trained mediator, ready to assist parties in bringing their case to global resolution.

A good listener, Lindsay recognizes a divorce can have far reaching impacts on a family's financial future and interpersonal relationships. She strives to respectfully represent clients in all aspects of alternative dispute resolution, while standing ready to litigate matters when necessary to protect their interests. Her experience stretches beyond trial to the appellate level.

Drawing on her personal experiences, Lindsay also takes a thoughtful approach to developing custody arrangements and otherwise working with children. Courts often appoint her as Guardian Ad Litem — or even as an attorney — to represent children in acrimonious disputes, providing them an advocate who can voice their best interests to the court. Lindsay has also been appointed as Guardian Ad Litem for litigants who require assistance navigating the court process in acrimonious cases.
