Michael has handled litigation in federal and state courts on a variety of issues, including corporate law, employment harassment and compensation, hospitality, construction, contract disputes, fraud and complex commercial matters. He works with a range of companies and individuals on the formation of business entities and groups and the structuring of business relationships through management, licensing and other agreements.

He has extensive experience representing and advising clients in the hospitality industry, including chefs, hotel groups and commercial real estate owners. Michael works with his clients to create management and licensing agreements and leases, and on the formation of business entities and the drafting of operating agreements. He also has experience representing chefs and hospitality groups in litigation and contract negotiations.

Michael has worked on numerous commercial and residential real estate transactions and has experience drafting and negotiating purchase agreements; preparing deeds and closing documents; reviewing title issues and policies; and advising on environmental issues.

In his construction practice, Michael handles all manner of legal issues, including contract negotiation and disputes, mechanic's liens, bond claims, mediation, arbitration and general legal advice. He has particular experience handling these matters for contractors building data centers.
