A trusted intellectual property adviser, Scott counsels clients in the pharmaceutical, chemical, nutraceutical and medical device industries on a variety of legal issues, particularly those involving patents.

Scott's background in molecular and cancer biology, and knowledge of monoclonal antibodies, puts him in an especially strong position to advise life sciences clients on a full range of matters such as:

- Patent prosecution
- Patent term extension and adjustment
- Post-grant proceedings including inter partes reviews and post-grant reviews
- Post-grant reviews
- Opinions (invalidity, clearance, due diligence)
- Litigation, including Hatch-Waxman and Biosimilar (BPCIA) litigation
- Trade secrets
- European oppositions

He has also assisted clients in developing worldwide patent portfolios designed to address generic and biosimilar competition.

Scott has experience with a wide variety of medical technology, including CRISPR, antibody-drug conjugates, exon skipping, AAV vectors, small molecule therapeutics, diagnostics and cell-based therapy.

He represents clients in matters before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and in U.K. and European patent actions.
