Stephen is an experienced litigator who represents clients — particularly in the technology, financial services and transportation sectors — in high-stakes litigation and regulatory compliance matters.

He designs efficient strategies for defending high-volume, business sensitive litigation that reduce legal spend and maximize opportunities to achieve favorable outcomes in matters instituted in state and federal courts.

In addition to representing clients as national coordinating counsel, in all phases of litigation and in government investigations, Stephen counsels clients on the development and implementation of practical strategies to mitigate risk.
